NEW COURSE for teachers

EDCI 396—EDUCATIONAL CHANGE DURING TIMES OF CRISIS

3 semester credits

This class focuses on the changes K-12 teachers make when they are required to deliver instruction remotely due to circumstances beyond their control. Using the theoretical frameworks of experiential learning and change process, the class provides opportunity for teachers to reflect on their learning as it relates to new skills, beliefs, materials, and relationships.

To register:

<https://www.burmanu.ca/onlinelearning>

The Online Learning at Burman University page will include the following sections:

- ◆ Summer 2020
- ◆ Readiness to Learn Online – read this over and if you can honestly and confidently answer ‘Yes’ to most of the questions, then you may be ready to study online. If you cannot confidently answer YES to most of these questions, then online learning may NOT be for you.
- ◆ Registration Online
- ◆ Orientation to Online Study – this orientation must be completed by everyone taking an online course from Burman University. The purpose of an asynchronous orientation to online learning at Burman University is to make sure you are ready to start when the course opens. You will not be allowed to start the course if you haven’t completed the tasks.
- ◆ Withdrawal Procedures – Teachers who believe that they cannot complete a course successfully (grade of C- or above) must email Larry Murrin (BU Registrar) at – registrar@burmanu.ca BEFORE the grace week, otherwise an F will be recorded as the final grade.
